To be sure that Bed Bugs are eradicated, call Angus Hygiene and Pest Control as they will have all the most efficient bed bug treatments to completely get rid of your problem.

Bed bugs can survive in upholstery, in clothes, on blankets, sheets, behind bedroom furniture, all sorts of cracks and crevices, mattresses, almost anywhere. They are fine in cold or hot environments, and are attracted to a warm human body as well as the carbon dioxide we breathe out.

Bed Bugs survive on the blood of their victims.

They usually get to work just before dawn, but they won't wake you up because you won't feel them. The reason for that is they inject a numbing agent as they bite you so that it won't hurt you. Once that agent wears off, the bite will be very itchy (but don't scratch it!) and it may come up as looking like a rash, or spots with pus in the middle.

Bed bugs breed very quickly and you have to get rid of the whole life cycle for the infestation to be annihilated, and for this you will need professional bed bug treatment.

Remember that bed bugs do not just live in the bed so other areas, mostly around the bed, need to be treated as well. Anywhere there is a crack or crevice is a good bed for bed bugs.

Sometimes it can be difficult to know if you actually have a bed bug problem. You might be getting bites, but unsure where they are coming from. They also tend to hide quite a bit, so a tell-tale sign is if you can see little spots of blood on the covers.
